When the author of the Foxfire Collection of United States Type Coins asked me to write a few words about this fabulous collection, there was only one answer: Absolutely.

In the years I've been with NGC, I have graded over 5 million coins. When you're seeing the world's finest coins on an almost daily basis, it's easy to become jaded. It sometimes seems to me that a gem is a gem is a gem. But every now and then a coin comes along that makes me stop in mid-sentence and just say "Wow!" Seeing nearly 200 "wow" coins at once almost makes me hyperventilate. Yet, such is the Foxfire Collection.

The quality of each and every one of these pieces is simply astonishing. They were very obviously selected one at a time for their superb preservation and outstanding eye appeal. The amount of work that went into gathering all these coins together is difficult to imagine. It literally took decades to sift through all the prospective purchases to find just the right coin that would make its owner say, "That's as good as it gets." Not surprisingly, the owner of this collection is no longer young, though I suspect that the pleasure of assembling such a fabulous type set has added immeasurable to his longevity.

When I think about the Foxfire Collection, it's a challenge to decide which coins impress me the most. There are a few, however, that I can still see when I close my eyes. The coppers were really amazing. The two Liberty Cap Half Cents were favorites of mine. NGC graded both of them MS-66 RB, and the 1797 in particular just glowed it was so beautiful. It had that lustrous originality you rarely see in early half cents.

Foxfire's Chain and Wreath Cents were also super coins' we graded both MS-66, and the Chain Cent even had some mint red!

Though the minor coins don't usually get a lot of attention, the Foxfire Collection includes some really memorable ones. The 1862 Indian in PF-67 is just a gorgeous coin, and so is the 1864 two-cent piece in MS-66 RD.

It's in the silver issues that some of the most amazing coins are found. How often do you get to see a 1794 half dime in MS-67 and an 1800 in MS-66 side by side? And no less than three of the Foxfire Seated Liberty Half Dimes were graded MS-67 by NGC. The 1796 dime is a coin that sometimes comes in high grade, but at MS-67 the Foxfire specimen is "as good as it gets." Large Eagle Dimes don't often come nice, but the Foxfire 1805 is a beautiful MS-66.

I was really blown away by the 1807 quarter graded MS-66. This is only the second coin of that type we've graded that high. Incredible! Arrows and Rays Quarters are common in Unc, but the Foxfire specimen graded MS-67! That's the best we've ever seen.

Another coin that is just unbelievable is the 1797 Small Eagle Half. It's the former Lelan Rogers piece, and NGC graded it MS-66. This coin has its original surfaces, and both sides are beautifully toned. It's a rare type in any grade, but to see it in this condition is a once in a lifetime experience. The 1807 Draped Bust is a more common coin overall, but the Foxfire specimen graded MS-66, and that's another record for NGC. Just to show you how much attention was paid to excellence throughout, the Foxfire Kennedy Half graded MS-67. Most collectors wouldn't think to put so much care into a common type coin, but the discriminating owner of this collection did.

The Foxfire early silver dollars are of unbelievable quality and eye appeal. The 1795 Flowing Hair is MS-66, the Small Eagle is MS-66, and the Large Eagle is MS-65! All are sharp strikes and absolutely gorgeous coins.

The Foxfire Collection includes some really fantastic commems, as well. Both Pan-Pac fifties are MS-65, while the less rare pieces are likewise of uniformly high quality. One of the really amazing surprises in this collection is the 1951-S Washington/Carver. It's common date, but I believe this is only the second one we've graded MS-67.

As fabulous as these coins are individually, it's the collection in its entirety that really overwhelms. The commitment of time and the pursuit of excellence that characterize the Foxfire Collection are hard to comprehend. This was an all-out effort, the goal of which was nothing less than perfection. I believe the owner of the Foxfire Collection came as close to achieving this goal as is humanly possible, and the proof of his success is evident in the coins themselves. It's also evident in NGC's Census Report, since each and every Foxfire coin is so pedigreed on its holder and listed as a separate line item in the population totals.

It's been said that all the great collections have already been broken up and dispersed. Eliasberg, Pittman, Garrett—they're all just memories now. But the Foxfire Collection of United State Type Coins is intact, and I believe it can be named in the same breath with these important collections of the past. It was my great pleasure to have viewed the nearly 200 coins that make up the Foxfire Collection, and I'm very proud that its owner selected NGC to certify each one and prepare PHOTO PROOF presentation of the most important pieces.

The present book serves as a wonderful living document of this superb collection, and it represents nearly as much effort as went into assembling the coins. It's uncertain whether a collection of this magnitude and quality will be attempted again, as so much in the coin hobby has changed. Many of these coins were acquired decades ago, when both prices and the level of competition were much lower. There will be those who continue to acquire individual coins of outstanding rarity and preservation, but I don't believe there will ever be another Foxfire Collection. It's "as good as it gets."
